The year is 1434 and the great economic depression is ravaging the world's commerce. The Great Laundry — an incredibly large organization that manages the supply of clean clothes for the whole world — has been losing a lot of money because of a high price inflation and demand for new clothes. The labelling section, which prints crisp, bright new tags on clothes, has been losing a lot of customers because of inferior ink ruining clothes. The casual clothes department has been losing both price and market share. The Global Trade Order department has not been doing very well lately because the currency in the global economy has been rapidly depreciating. To add to their woes, most of the inventory they have is unsellable now because there are too many customers competing for them. The manager of the labelling section, a loner named Meredith, is starting to feel like she is losing control of her life. On the train to work she starts thinking about her family. Her husband was a surgeon in Korea, and her son has a rare genetic skin condition which is making him very unwell. When she arrives at work, she finds out that her team needs someone with experience in print design to help them with the new inking machines. It seems like a good opportunity for some experimentation as she can have more fun with the job than at home, while at the same time getting away from the responsibility of taking care of her son. But everything does not work out as she had planned. Her supervisor is the exact opposite of the previous one who was overly friendly and egotistical. He is cruel, demanding, constantly gets angry at her and the other employees, and most of the machines are not working. Meredith receives a promotion, but at the same time, an even worse shift starts. Meredith's son is growing sicker, her family is suffering from the high cost of life, the world is going into recession and the labelling section is due to fire someone if it does not get back on track. She works very hard to keep her head above water and puts in a lot of long hours, but it is not enough... She is alone and her unhappiness and anger spills over into everything. Now, for the real secret of the game: the Great Laundry is experiencing a lot of incidents when people who are alone or unsatisfied at work, or who are just heading out on a lonely, long vacation, get a new owner and return with a single item in their pocket. They come back empty-

Legacy Some 200 years after his death, Pope Vigilius (or Vigilius Magnus, 640–649), in his Sermon LXI, denounced a fable he heard about his nephew, the Emperor Justin II and the mermaid by the side of Lake Como. According to the tale, when the Emperor was about to die, he sent this nephew, who loved a mermaid, to recover the body of the emperor in the water. The nephew eventually won, but the mermaid failed. It was well known in Roman Curia and at the time of the fable was the creation of Domitian, calling it the merus adiuva. See also History of the Church in the Middle Ages References Further reading
